Score of Planes Swoop Down on City Early Today

Several of the planes spiraled down to within a hundred feet of the city, giving Hope a good look at them as they went over.

Earnshaw turned in a perfect performance, holding the Cardinals to five hits, while Grove allowed them nine yesterday.

The Old Hatred Is Dead

THE approaching celebration of the sesqui-centennial of the battle of Kings Mountain, in South Carolina, is not only significant because it commemorates one of the decisive combats in our struggle for independence. The manner in which the celebration is being held speaks volumes about the changed mental attitude that this country has gained during recent years.

For this celebration will not be confined to a recitation of the deeds of the brave mountaineers who obliterated a British army and changed the complexion of the revolution. It will include, also, the dedication of a marker on the grave of Colonel Patrick Ferguson, who commanded the redcoats at Kings Mountain.

Colonel Ferguson was a brave man and a talented soldier. He was also, what some of the British commanders were not—a gentleman, with his full share of humane feelings. His brother officers spread rapine and plunder throughout the southland, he saw to it that his troops behaved decently, and did not make war on unarmed civilians. Killed in the action that wiped out his command, he left a good name behind him, and it is only fitting that this country honor his memory at the approaching ceremonies.

But it is worth noting that this act—this erection of a monument to Colonel Ferguson—is rather out of the ordinary in this country. In the past we studied our Revolutionary battlefields with monuments, but we did not bother to commemorate the deeds of our former enemies. Under the old tradition, the redcoats and their leaders were all unquestionable gang of villains and cutthroats, and no American would have dreamed of paying a tribute to any of them.

This old tradition is about dead now. We have grown wiser, and we can admit that there were good men, and bad men, on both sides. We are beginning to realize, too, the enormous importance of preserving friendly relations between the two great English-speaking nations; and the dedication of a monument to Colonel Ferguson is an indication of this realization. The old bitterness is gone.

Laugh That Off

THIRTY young men of Little Rock have met and organized a movement, which is to become country-wide if their plans carry, to "laugh off" the Eighteenth amendment. They are not going to battle for liquors, nor against them. They are going to try to get people in the notion of taking the Eighteenth amendment with a laugh.

Funny sort of movement, that, but it may take root. There will be wets to whom the movement will appeal. The American people are "joiners," and as they seem to join everything and anything that is proposed, they may tie into a "laugh that off" movement relative to the Eighteenth amendment.

But the amendment can not be laughed off. It is an integral part of the constitution of this country, and the constitution is the most serious thing in support of this government. The laws may be silly. Most of them are silly. But they are easily altered. The Constitution is something about which dignity should hover. Its the bulwark of all safety.

The Little Rock organization perhaps thinks that if people laugh at the Eighteenth amendment it will soon be displaced. People do laugh at the amendment now, and practically displace it, but because they do this, there is less respect all the time for law and for government. And disrespect or law and for government means danger ahead.

The Eighteenth amendment must either be sustained or defeated, and by people seriously interested in the more vital point—the building up of respect for law and for government.

Bishop Cannon, under fire of new charges, returns to America from Brazil, a honeymoon interrupted, to face these charges. But he pays a fine compliment to Dwight Morrow, who stands openly for the repeal of the amendment, but stands as definitely for its enforcement until it is repealed. Morrow is an open advocate of repeal, not one who drinks one way and votes another.

America isn't going to laugh off the Eighteenth amendment. The issue is foremost in the country. It will have to be answered in other manner than by the hee-haws of ribaldry.—Hot Springs Sentinel-Record

The National Horseshoe Pitching Tournament is to be held in Chicago soon, but the experts are not picking the winners. It will be a toss up, they say.

One good thing about horseshoe pitching is that you can throw the game and still be on the level.

Completing a crossword puzzle is perhaps the only way some married men can get in the last word.

That may be "just another ball game" in Philadelphia today, but there will be millions who regard it as something more than this.

The Boy Who Made Good!

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—This is not exactly one of the Anti-Saloon League's best years. Without waiting for the November elections, it can already be said now that the primaries are over that the dries have not made any appreciable political gains and have suffered considerable loss.

The league still will hold large majorities in Congress after the election, but apparently there is going to be a real reduction of those majorities for the first time since Congress enacted prohibition. Increasing aggressiveness of the wets is reflecting itself both in the attitude of candidates for office and in the actions of the voters.

All this synchronizes with realization in Washington that the league has lost much of its political might in dealing with the federal government. The administration is going ahead under its own steam in the attempt to enforce prohibition, rather than under the league's lash.

And the wets claim to find encouragement in the way things have gone in Illinois, New Jersey, Massachusetts, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, North Carolina, Montana, California, Washington, Alabama, Michigan and Nebraska. Which is a fine assortment of states, whether or not all the glee is justified.

Wets Gain in G. O. P.

The worst thing the dries have to worry about is that they find themselves on the outside looking in more frequently than they like. With the increase of wet strength in the Republican party, instances have begun to appear in some states where both parties and their candidates are wet and the dries have no chance to back a winner.

The next Illinois senator is sure to be no friend of the dries because the league has turned against Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick since she agreed to head the state referendum result and is supporting a third candidate who has no chance of victory. The best the dries hope to get out of the situation is the defeat of Mrs. McCormick, who has always been dry, by James Hamilton Lewis, the Democrat, who is wringing wet.

New Jersey likewise has two wet senatorial candidates opposing each other—Dwight Morrow and Alexander Simpson, Republican and Democrat. The dry candidate in the Republican primaries, Franklin Fort, was badly licked.

All Eyes on New York

All eyes at this writing are on New York. As in Illinois and New Jersey, there are many Republicans there who don't believe they can elect governors and senators as long as they continue to be the dry party. The resignation of U. S. District Attorney Tuttle of New York with a declaration for repeal put the issue squarely up to the G. O. P. and if it nominates Tuttle and goes wet the dries will have taken one more hard sock.

The dries held their own in New York's Republican congressional primaries except for the defeat of Congressman Wallace Dempsey by a wet.

In Nebraska the league must choose between Senator George W. Norris, whom it opposed in the Republican primary because he stood for Smith in 1928, and Gilbert M. Hitchcock, the Democratic nominee, who favors modification. In Washington the two state conventions went wet and Senator Wesley Jones, staunch dry, preceded Mrs. McCormick in her waywardness by promising to head referendum results. So did very dry Senator Tom Walsh of Montana, opposed this year by a wet Republican and requiring many wet Democratic votes for re-election.

Wet Wins in West

California is going to have a wet governor, as Mayor Ralph of San Francisco will succeed a dry after being nominated against strong dry opposition. Democrats in Ohio have nominated a wet, Robert J. Bulkley, for the Senate and think they can elect him although his election probably would be more of an administrative defeat than a dry defeat. The Republican party stayed dry, despite National Committeeman Maurice Maschke's publicly announced jump into the wet camp.

One of the year's biggest surprises in Washington was the defeat of two such conspicuous dries as Congressmen Hudson and Crampton in Michigan. (There's a recount on in Crampton's case.) Defeats by wets of Sears in Nebraska and Dempsey in New York were among similar instances.

Hicks, included the song, "America the Beautiful," led by Mrs. Martha L. Padgett. Miss Martha Virginia Stuart favored the meeting with a very delightful reading. The President, Miss Maggie Twichell, opened the meeting with a few words of greeting and outlined the plan of study for the year. The minutes of the last meeting were read by Mrs. W. L. Spicer. The responses to the roll call were historical items about the State of Arkansas. Mrs. Spicer then gave a very comprehensive history of Arkansas and presented the following ladies on the program, Miss Evelyn King in her usual sweet manner, the song, "Arkansas" the official song of the state. She was accompanied at the piano by Mrs. B. A. Boyett. Mrs. W. O. Shipley gave an interesting talk on Arkansas literature.

Nab Train Robbers

BUCHAREST, Sept. 30.—(UP)—A locomotive driver, a conductor and a brakeman, as well as five professional bandits, were arrested when an investigation of a series of train robberies near Botosani revealed that the train crew were working hand-in-glove with the bandits. The train was being slowed down at a certain spot while the bandits broke into a car which had been marked to indicate that its contents were especially valuable.

Mother's Hand Guides La Follette Clan

Belle Case La Follette, widow of the famous senator, has been a big factor in her family's political destiny, even now aiding her sons, Robert, Jr. (left), and Philip.

MADISON, Wis.—(AP)—Belle Case La Follette has pointed the way of political success to her second son as she did for his elder brother and their father.

The judgment and wisdom of the widow of Robert M. La Follette, the senior, is credited with importance in the republican primary campaign which started Philip F. La Follette on the pathway to the Wisconsin governorship.

Mrs. La Follette's husband called her his "counselor," and freely admitted the aid her faith and foresight gave. Philip, 33, defeated Gov. Walter J. Kohler in the primary. Two years ago Kohler attained prominence by splitting the La Follette delegation to the national convention, and then defeating the progressive candidate for the governorship. The elder son, appointed to fill the unexpired term of his father when he died, in 1927, was elected to the office two years later. He now is 35. Mrs. La Follette was urged to seek the office her husband left but she preferred to see Robert M. Jr., occupy it.

Mrs. La Follette and her husband were sweethearts in the early 80's. Both were graduated from the law school. She was an adviser in all his political campaigns: for district attorneyship of Dane county, for congress, for governor, for the senate and finally for the presidency in 1921.

Peat Formation Catches on Fire Near Caruth, Mo.

KENNETT, Mo., Sept. 30.—Excitement was caused in the Cotton Plant neighborhood between Hornersville and Caruth last week when the report was circulated that the earth was on fire at the Everett Langdon place, known as "The Mounds." By the time the story reached Kennett, it had grown considerably. The earth, or a small portion of it was on fire but it "caught" from a surface fire. About a quarter of a mile north and a quarter east of "The Mounds" is a formation of peat on the surface of the ground. For several days the people living near had noticed flames in the woods. Investigation revealed there was a fire, which had not been extinguished by the hard rains.

By Williams Three Razorbacks Win Place on Team

Earl Secret, Hope, Among Those Placed This Season

FAYETTEVILLE, Oct. 2.—Three members of last year's Razorback reserves—Ledbetter, Secret and Chambers—won permanent jobs on the 1936 University of Arkansas eleven through their brilliant work in the opening game of the season against the College of the Ozarks last Saturday.

LED BETTER

Ledbetter, a hard running back, carried the ball 17 times for a total gain of 78 yards and gave every indication of being a consistent ground gainer to take the place of Dick Miller of last year's team. Ledbetter is a vicious plunger and made most of his yardage on off-tackle smashes.

SECRET

Secret, who broke into varsity competition at left guard, proved to be a sterling defensive player and has probably earned a permanent berth at guard. Secret is a 175-pound six-footer and Razorback coaches expect him to develop into a good team-mate for Captain Creighton on the other side of the line.

CHAMBERS

Chambers, playing his first game as a regular end, had about everything a good end needs. No gains were made around his flank and he had the honor of scoring the Razorbacks' first touchdown of the season, sprinting over the goal line to grab a long pass from Holmes.

The showing of these reserves of last year is encouraging in view of the failure of the sophomore material to come up to the varsity standards. Ledbetter, Secret and Chambers are assured of starting the game against Tulsa University at Tulsa, October 4.

Many Expected To See Hope-DeQueen In Clash

The Bobcats Are Reported To Be In Excellent Condition As They Go Into the Third Game of The Season Friday

By CHARLES REYNORSON
Hope high school's Bobcat football team this year is composed of unusually good men—all clean cut, husky players. The average weight will run between 140 and 160 pounds, ranging from Matthew Reeves, 190, pounds to Pete Brown, the lightest man on the team at 140.

Hope has won two games this year, and a decided victory. In neither did the opposition manage to get within 25 yards of Hope's goal. The first game with Ashdown was won by a score of 19-0, and the other with Magnolia 25-0.

Coch Wilkins makes no distinction between the men on his team. There is no first and second team, all are considered as first string men.

Out of approximately 40 men to pick from, Coach has chosen the following 22 to play against DeQueen on Friday: Pritchett and Sissell, playing left ends; both are experienced and have made good showings in previous games. Left tackles will be Jones and Shipp, both good players and hard to beat. Jones has played three years and Shipp has two to his credit. Schooley and Jack Brown as left guards, first year men but play like veterans. At center will be Chamberlain, a new man but doing good work. Right guards will be Phillips and Breeding, new men but holding down the position well. Playing right tackle will be Adams, a first year man and Jacks with three years experience to his credit. Mauldin and Feilds at right end, virtually new men but good on both offense and defense. The backfield will be composed of Harrell, Reeves and Bacon, all veterans of the gridiron who always give a fine display of plunging and broken field running. The last man we mention but not least, in Bill Wray who serves in the role of signal caller and is also a good broken field runner.

The second backfield combination is Moser and Rowe, halfbacks; Pete Brown, quarterback, and Hargis, fullback.

Weight and position of the 22 men mentioned is as follows:

LE Pritchett	155
LT Sissell	145
LT Jones	175
Shipp	150
LG Schooley	160
J. Brown	185
C Chamberlain	170

Castle Claimants Pitch Their Tents on Grounds

CRAMOND, Scotland, Oct. 2.—(UP)—Members of a family named Law, who claim to be the rightful heirs to the Lauriston Castle here, have pitched a camp on the grounds where they intend to remain until the courts definitely decide ownership.

At present the castle is owned by the Scottish nation. There are 33 claimants, 13 of whom live in the Sunderland area and the group claims to have sufficient proof of ownership. The Law family is descended from James Law, who in 1615 was Archbishop of Glasgow. Mary Queen of Scots is said to have been connected with the Laws by blood ties. The castle is estimated to be worth about $180,000.

Ward Week Aims at Better Times

Nation-Wide Store Sale Advertises New Power of Dollar

Ward Week preparations have instigated a vigorous business boom among many industries. It has proved itself to be a tonic for the sick business conditions prevailing the Nation for months, because it necessarily demands extra production. Ward Week means extra work for thousands of factory heads whose products are sold over Ward counters—and extra pay for the thousands of wage earners employed by these factories.

George B. Everitt, President of the company, believes that unemployment lessening, results in an upward trend to our general business structure and prosperity. It has taken more than 1,000 factories several months to produce the merchandise which will be sold in 515 Ward stores during Ward Week. These factories have, in turn, added more than 20,000 people to their payrolls in order to handle the work which the tremendous Ward Week orders create. Montgomery Ward & Co. Stores are adding thousands of people to their sales staffs for this event. In these times of merchandise is offered during this time step toward boosting the nation's prosperity.

The low prices at which Ward's merchandise is offered during this sale Ward Week shoppers' dollar more purchasing power than it has had for years. Evidence the stimulating effect of Ward Week as it penetrates to practically every type of industry. When one thinks of the thousands of men it puts to work . . . the millions of dollars of savings it brings to the people all over the country, it calls for no stretch of imagination to agree that Ward Week is the direct cause of a new and consequential cycle of national prosperity.

BEGIN HEARD TODAY

CELIA MITCHELL, 17, faces a new life. She leaves her home in Baltimore where she has lived with her widowed mother, MARY ANN MITCHELL, to join her father, JOHN MITCHELL, and her grandmother in a stately New York dwelling.

The girl had not even known her father was living until the day he came to the Baltimore apartment. Celia had supposed him dead. Her mother, MARY ANN MITCHELL, her mother's second husband, to be her father, Mitchell, changed the girl's life of wealth and immediate luxury. This change, she leaves her mother, unaware that Mrs. Rogers is, actually, her mother's second husband, and she leaves her mother, unaware that Mrs. Rogers is, actually, her mother's second husband, and she leaves her mother, unaware that Mrs. Rogers is, actually, her mother's second husband.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

IT was characteristic of Evelyn Parsons that she should seek to win her way by pleasant means. These falling, she was quick to change her tactics. Evelyn was engaged in such "pleasant" plotting when she invited Tod Jordan to join her weekend house party. Jordan was exactly the type to fascinate an unsophisticated girl like Celia.

They stood near the doorway, Evelyn stunning in a gown of sea green stuff which contrasted brilliantly with her hair, and the young man bending toward her attentively.

"Must you always be more interested in other women?" she chided archly.

Jordan's quick answer deepened Mrs. Parsons' smile. She had always been sensitive to flattery. "The girl you're to be particularly nice to is the little one in pink," she went on.

Celia was designated. Without apparently shifting his gaze Jordan made a hasty appraisal, missing few details of Celia's appearance. One eyebrow rose the interest. Otherwise he offered no comment.

"Who else is there you don't know?" Evelyn asked.

"There's only one I have met—Eve Brooks."

"Come! I'll introduce you."

Celia Mitchell, who had been watching this tableau from the doorway across the room, turned her head and began talking to Lisl Duncan. She was curious about the newcomer. Who was he? Evelyn had mentioned the names of all her other guests. And this man looked like someone important. She tried to conceal her interest.

"Celia," Evelyn Parsons was saying, "this is Tod Jordan. One of my shipmates on the boat this last trip. He's violently prejudiced about brown eyes, so I brought him to you."

"How do you do?" Celia said. She looked up to encounter Tod Jordan's cool, quizzical smile. Jordan was just under six feet in height. He was slender, but well built, with a touch of militarism in the way he carried his shoulders. His face was bronzed, not ruddily sunburned, as were the other men. He had dark hair and eyes which seemed faintly challenging.

Perhaps Jordan was 25. Perhaps he was 30. There was a hard, polished surface to his manner which impressed Celia. She labeled it "sophistication."

The man bowed formally. "I am delighted," he said, taking her hand. "May I sit here?"

"Of course."

THERE was plenty of room on the divan, but Celia moved a little to one side. Lisl Duncan, who sat at Celia's left, evidently felt alighted and turned her back. Mrs. Parsons had joined another group.

"Our hostess is very brave," Jordan remarked casually.

"Oh, I think Mrs. Parsons is wonderful," Celia told him.

"Beautiful," the young man corrected her, "and very brave."

"I don't believe I understand."

"No? But it's so obvious. When a woman of Evelyn's age dares to invite into her home such competition—"

A meaningful wave of the hand completed the sentence.

Celia blushed. She was embarrassed and yet pleased. While Jordan was speaking there was not a trace of emotion in his face, but his voice had an exciting quality.

She knew too that the pink net party dress was becoming.

Lisl Duncan turned, evidently to make a demand on Jordan's attention. She wanted to know if he had seen a certain night club entertainer. Lisl was an amusing girl, not at all like her sister Kate, who was beautiful and dignified.

Lisl was boyish, awkward, and wore her red hair cropped short. Her little freckled face (sunburned, too) would have looked more at home on a tennis court than at a dinner party, but she appeared to go everywhere and know everyone.

She had a way of drawing original slang which was highly humorous.

Now she launched into extravagant praise of the new apartment house. "Celia," she said, "I liked Lisl better than the others."

Young Mrs. Brooks, whom no one called anything but "Eve," was blond and pretty in a more fragile way than Evelyn Parsons. Eve wore a gown of lemon yellow and looked like a slender daffodil.

There was a young man on either side of her, but Celia noticed Mrs. Brooks' frequent looks at Tod Jordan.

Courtney Brooks was explaining something to Kate Duncan and Mrs. Parsons. Kate's gown was glittering white with trailing skirt and a bodice which had shocked Celia.

Dinner was announced. Celia thrilled secretly when she found she was to sit between Tod Jordan and Jimmie Webster. Eve Brooks was at the other side of Webster and promptly monopolized him. That left Jordan to Celia.

Mrs. Parsons, at the head of the table, took note of this. The smile which she turned toward her right-hand guest was not in the least forced.

EVELYN had felt confident about Tod Jordan. That is, she was confident that he would serve her purpose. Of Jordan's actual history she was as much at a loss as four-fifths of his acquaintances.

She had said truthfully that she had met Jordan on the ocean liner. She had chatted with him in a deck chair, strolled occasionally in the moonlight and watched him invariably winning at cards. Being observant Evelyn had noticed Jordan was usually to be seen with young women who had large bank accounts, and with men he met in the card room.

His working hours, she decided, were those he spent at cards. Was his name really Jordan? Evelyn doubted this, but of course there was no proof. He seemed to know the right people, and he was tremendously effective on a romantic deck at night.

The widow's reasoning was simple. At present Celia Mitchell was useful to her, but that usefulness would end soon. Jordan was exactly the aide she needed. Evelyn Parsons was playing her cards well.

The dinner that evening was very gay. The table with its flowers and silver and crystal was more festive than anything Celia had ever seen. The colors of the women's gowns added glamour to the scene. No one in the room realized that this was the first party Celia Mitchell had ever attended.

Jordan talked of the races, polo, and a recent aerial trip he had made which ended in excitement. "But you haven't told me anything about yourself!" he reminded her.

"There's nothing to tell."

"That is quite impossible."

Again Celia's cheeks colored. Without a smile, without the least change of inflection, Tod Jordan managed to convey implications. His dark eyes watched the girl.

"But there really is nothing to tell," she laughed. "You see, New York and everything here is new to me. I've been in school until a month ago. I've never seen anything or been anywhere! That's why it's so wonderful to come to this party."

Again Jordan's eyebrow did the little trick of raising and then lowering itself ever so slightly. "Are you a relative of Mrs. Parsons?" he asked.

"No, no! Only she and my father are old friends. Father's coming down tomorrow."

"Really?" Celia would have been astounded to know that Tod Jordan could quote her father's financial rating precisely. He had considerably more information about John Mitchell than had Mitchell's daughter.

"But all this time you've been in school you must have been doing something," the man persisted. "How do you amuse yourself? Tennis? Like to swim? Dance?"

"I'm no good at tennis," Celia said, "but I love swimming and dancing."

"Then I'm glad I came. I insist on the first dance."

HE turned his head to reply to Kate Duncan. Celia for several moments was neglected.

There was a haze of smoke across the table, dimming the candle light. Jimmie Webster was recounting polo anecdotes in a loud voice.

She noticed that Eve Brooks was flirting openly both with Jimmie and Walter Carr. Nobody seemed surprised or even interested in this. Eve's husband had been devoting the evening to Kate Duncan.

"I want to talk to you," Jordan was saying softly. "Can't we get away from this?"

Celia's pulse quickened, but she shook her head. It was near the end of the dessert course. Suddenly Eve Brooks pushed back her chair and stood up.

"Who's going to dance with me?" she called out, her eyes directly on Walter Carr. "Who's going to dance with me right now?"

She and Carr departed. A few moments later a radio fox trot burst on the air.

The others were rising. Jordan caught Celia's arm and led her through the living room to the porch. There was a soft breeze, and the lawn was drenched with moonlight. The radio orchestra was playing a waltz now. Jordan sang the words:

"Stars and steel guitars
And lucious lips as red as wine—"

They danced in perfect rhythm. Celia was conscious of Jordan's close embrace, and that her heart was pounding.

"I left her and threw away
The key-ee to Paradise—"

It was an orchestra leader in a night club who was singing the ballad. The tune beat in the girl's ears.

The music ended. The dancers hesitated. There was no one else in sight. For a trembling moment Celia's eyes met Jordan's.

that in itself will make the city a point of interest for people who are visiting the dam and lake. By doing this the tourist possibilities of the city will be increased.

"This unusual treatment can be worked out in such a way that Boulder City becomes an outstanding factor in civic design in the country. It is logical that this should be, for being built by the government and thus having the official stamp on it, people will naturally look for a city design that in itself will be an object lesson in city planning."

Though no exact plan has yet been decided upon, officials of the Interior Department said the town would probably be built around a large open square, with administration buildings grouped at one end, residents lining two sides and the other end left untenanted.

Of the five possible locations considered, that recommended by De Boer and Young was the only one that had workable soil. This is an important element to be taken into account as prospective lessees could be counted on to demand ground for lawns and possibly gardens.

Accessibility to the railroad and wagon road which will be built from Las Vegas to the dam foundation is another feature which made the recommended site stand out, according to the engineer's report. The proposed location adjoins the railroad, while the highway approach is nearly on the level with the road as now routed.

DeBoer said in his report that the highway could be located in such a way as to go by the proposed town-site in a short route.

With an ideal view, practically unlimited space, excellent sewerage disposal facilities, low temperatures, easy access to highway and railroad, the

Huck Finn Blamed

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Oct. 2.—(UP)—Huckleberry Finn is suspected to have been the inspiration of four Cincinnati boys, the eldest 13 and the youngest 9, who "hooked" a flat boat on the Kentucky side of the Ohio River, started south to escape going to school. Things were going great until the youngest fell overboard. His cries attracted police. Now they're in school.

Everyone knows that heat purifies and so TOASTING removes harmful irritants that cause throat irritation and coughing. No wonder 20,679 physicians have stated LUCKIES to be less irritating! Everyone knows that sunshine mellows—that's why TOASTING includes the use of the Ultra Violet Ray.

Ideal City to House Boulder Dam Men

Government Engineers Lay Out Quarters For Men at Scene

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—(UP)—The ideal city—from the viewpoint of the prohibitionist and moral reformer—soon will be laid out by government engineers near the site of Boulder Dam, out in the once "wild and woolly west."

This community, minus the bootlegging, racketeering and dens of iniquity that supposedly cling with barnacle-like tenacity to most of the nation's metropolises, is to be erected to house the thousands and more workmen and engineers who will labor for 10 years building the mammoth dam. A model to the country and to the world, the city, a name for which has not yet been chosen, will be situated on a gently sloping ridge overlooking the dam site and nearby Boulder lake, about 8 or 10 miles from Las Vegas, Nev., once the rendezvous of the west's notorious "bad men."

To insure actual prohibition, it is the government's plan to rent plots in the town rather than to sell them. Thus if any unlawful act is found to have been committed, a clause in the lease provides that the land shall at once revert to the government and the lease terminated.

It was with great difficulty that a site for the town, which when completed will probably house some 4,000 or 5,000 inhabitants, was decided upon. Reclamation Commissioner Elwood Mead called upon S. R. DeBoer, consultant city plan engineer of Denver, to make a study of all available sites and, with the help of Walker R. Young, resident engineer for Boulder Dam, make a final decision upon one of them.

In his report to Mead, De Boer discussed the advantages and disadvantages of five sites available to the dam site. He and Young finally chose one, six miles from the dam and about 1,400 feet above sea level with good vistas in all directions.

Because of the unusual terrain, De Boer expressed belief a town of extraordinary natural beauty and of odd design could be erected on the chosen spot. Its elevation, he said, would insure the maximum of coolness, a necessary factor to be considered in the sunbaked desert.

"More than the average city, does the plan of Boulder City (a name given in his report for purposes of designation) call for unusual treatment," DeBoer reported. "A plan of distinctive design must be devised
